Environmental, Social and Governance (ESG) Awareness Training for Compliance Officers

Environmental, social and governance (ESG) compliance has become an increasingly complex and challenging regulatory environment for companies to navigate. ESG and corporate compliance are quickly converging as more attention is paid to these matters in the social sphere, and new regulations are being increasingly discussed and planned.

The pressure from both politics and society has translated into the development of a number newly formed ESG legislation. To add to the pressure, investors are also calling on financial institutions to take environment, society and governance factors into account. This has consequences for the banks investment policy, but also for the acceptance of potential clients.

As a Pan African Bank, the Group has a high preference for business transactions and financing decisions which drive:

- o Sustainable growth;
- o Active management of negative impacts to the environment, communities and livelihoods;

- o The Group's acceptance of risks linked to initial heightened exposures in climate sensitive sectors and the emerging market context;
- o The Group's ambition to promote transitions and partner with clients in order to minimise negative impacts.

With an evolving ESG regulatory landscape, compliance professionals are faced with the challenge of ensuring their organization is equipped and ready to stay ahead of the curve of these important issues.
